Content:

Bamboo can be used in construction planning because based on its properties, the mechanical strength of bamboo has high tensile strength and high compressive strength so that it can be used for soil reinforcement. Bamboo which has good quality will also have good mechanical properties as well because bamboo which has good compressive strength, laboratory results also show that bamboo has good tensile strength as well. Thus, there is a correlation between compressive strength and tensile strength in bamboo which is an environmentally friendly material as a soil strengthening material. The data in this study were using bamboo Apus and Javanese bamboo. Because bamboo is often used in industry and is easily available in Semarang. This study uses a simple linear method (Ordinary Least Squares). Simple linear regression model is one of the regression models that are often used in regression analysis. The dataset divided into 2 part, namely by comparing 60% of training data and 40% of testing data. The result from the data testing showing linier regression (least squares) estimate becomes very sensitive to random errors in the observed target, producing a large variance and the following results are obtained Correlation Coefficient 0.99607873, Mean Squared Error 12. 58799, Variance Score 125.60. The results show that the correlation coefficient is 0.99607873, it's mean that the linear model is close to number 1 meaning that this model is a good model because the correlation coefficient value is close to 1 so there is a positive relationship between or positive correlation between the compressive and tensile tests.

Greeting from the Chairman

Assalamualaikum warahmatullahi wabarakatuh

Good morning Ladies and Gentlemen,

The honored ones: Rector of UMMagelang, Keynote speakers, Mayor of Magelang City, and participants,
Welcome to the 1st Borobudur International Symposium.

The main theme of this symposium is "Local resources empowerment towards advance, smart and sustainable system" as a part of the United Nations agenda for sustainable development goals in 2030.

Let me inform you that the 1st Borobudur International Symposium is attended by 475 participants, including those from India, Philippines, China, Malaysia, and United States.

I'm absolutely aware that the major comment for this symposium must be: why was this symposium in engineering and applied sciences (such as computer engineering, physics, and health sciences) combined with social and humanities sciences (such as education, economics, and law).

I'll answer it clearly that for now to the future, there is almost no barrier between hard sciences and soft sciences. For example, economics and education need technological touch. Likewise, technological findings need social science for culture implementation.

Therefore, I present you world-class keynote speakers whom able to capture the interdependence between these scientific topics, they are:

First, Professor Tony Lucey from Curtin University, Australia

Second, Professor Noorefendi Tamaldin from UTEM, Malaysia

Third, Mr Rajesh Ranolia from NIIT, India, and

The most beautiful keynote speaker, Mrs Yun Fatimah, PhD, Dean of the Faculty of Engineering, Universitas Muhammadiyah Magelang.

Please, give them a big round of applause!

I hope our later discussion may result transfer of experiences and research findings from participants to others, from one institution to another, from social researcher to engineering researcher and vice versa. Also, I hope this event can build a new and strong research network.

Certainly, this event will not be successful without the support of co-hosts. On behalf of the Scientific Committee, I thank the co-hosts:

1. Badan Penelitian dan Pengembangan Kota Magelang
2. Universitas Muhammadiyah Surabaya
3. Universitas Muhammadiyah Buton

Cooperative Tax: Regulation, Implementation and Expectation

Sugiyanto

Institut Manajemen Koperasi Indonesia

Abstract

Potential of government revenue from taxpayers is expected to come not only from estate enterprises (BUMN), private enterprises (BUMS) but also Cooperatives. Cooperative as taxpayers and cooperative also as tax collectors, who have taxation rights and obligations in accordance with applicable regulations. The number of active cooperatives in Indonesia is around 154,000 units, but the contribution of cooperatives as taxpayers is considered to be still limited, it is not because the business scale is still relatively small, but most cooperative managers still think that cooperatives do not need to pay taxes. This study aims to examine the regulations, implementation, and expectations of managers of cooperatives as taxpayers. This study was conducted using descriptive qualitative and quantitative methods. The object of this study was conducted on a number of sample cooperatives that determined purposively based on turnover of up to Rp. 4.8 billion, between Rp. 4.8 billion to Rp. 50 billion and above Rp. 50 billion. The results of studies on various regulations show that cooperatives as a corporate that is a group of people who do joint ventures are taxpayers both as taxpayers such as corporate income tax, land and building tax, stamp duty, regional retribution, with holding income tax on salaries and value added tax collector. The understanding of the cooperative manager that a cooperative organization as a union between a cooperative company and its member households, in developing their business, they are prioritized to serve members, members as service user and cooperative owner. If there is excess capacity, the cooperative can transact with non-members. Thus the report of cooperative business success is separated between member services and non-member transactions. The consequence of this understanding is that there are still many cooperatives that have not paid corporate tax, especially those originating from the results of the service of members. Other conditions are not all cooperatives carry out functions as holding income tax on salaries and value added tax collector. But cooperatives are relatively compliant as land and building tax payers, Stamp Duty, Regional Tax. The cooperative manager expects that the results of operations originating from member services are not subject to corporate income tax.
